White

White is synonymous with purity and virginity. While in western culture it is the traditional colour of wedding dresses, other cultures, like the Chinese or Indian, see it as a mourning colour which symbolises death and it is the colour of spirits. The white flag symbolises truce, capitulation or peaceful intentions at a time of war. When we split white light (using a prism), it gets separated into its component colours. So white light thus contains all other colours. Similarly, when we combine the acoustic signals of all frequencies, we get what we call white noise.

Nitra Gallery, the artists and curators invite you to attend the exhibition White on White.
